HAVING read Mr. WHISTON's Primitive Euchariſt reviv'd; and, at the ſame time (what he tells us occaſioned his writing it) Biſhop H—— plain account of the Lord's ſupper: I thought myſelf obliged to acquaint the public (leſt it ſhould be imagined, that the Biſhop's miſtakes or miſrepreſentations had put Mr. WHISTON upon ſetting the world to-rights by this Eſſay) that there is no material difference between them: except that Mr. WHISTON inſiſts on the literal ſenſe of the ſacrifical phraſes [altar, oblation, &c.] uſed in the primitive writers; becauſe, as he reaſons (p. 3.) Chriſt and his Apoſtles lived in Judea, in the firſt century; when true and proper ſacrifices were continually offered both by Jews and Heathens: whereas the Biſhop has fairly ſhown that they are not ſo to be underſtood; not only from their own confeſſion (p. 55.) but (what is of more value) by irrefragable arguments, drawn from the nature of the thing (p. 52.) and from the authentic account thereof in the inſpir'd writers (p. 47.) you will, therefore, communicate this to the public: leſt any good Chriſtian, who has not opportunity of ſeeing Mr. WHISTON's piece, ſhould, by the title be induced to think [what he himſelf ſuggeſts (p. 109.) and what the ingenious gentlemen, who have given a good account of it, in the preſent ſtate of the republic of letters (vol. 17. p. 489.) ſeem to ſuppoſe] that the Biſhop may have been as unacquainted with primitive chriſtianity, as the generality of people in theſe latter ages; who, if we may take Mr. WHISTON's word for it, 'are ſo little acquainted with the ſtate of the 'three firſt centuries of the goſpel; that they often put 'upon men their own imaginations, for laws of chriſtia-'nity; and frequently perplex conſcientious, but weak 'Chriſtians, by impoſing upon them inſtances of injudi-'cious and uncommanded piety; while yet they heed-'leſly overlook many genuine laws and duties derived 'from Chriſt and his Apoſtles; and this, ſometimes, in 'caſe of great importance.'

There is, indeed, another thing, which I find advanced in the apoſtolical conſtitutions, and abetted by Mr. WHISTON; which ſeems to me not a little to invalidate their authority; though he eſteems them the moſt conſiderable part of the ſacred canon, as being derived from the Apoſtles (p. 84.) and that is the praying for departed ſaints at the celebration of the Euchariſt. The words are theſe: 'We farther pray to thee, O God, for me, who am no-'thing, who offer to thee. We farther offer to thee 'for all thoſe holy perſons, who have pleaſed thee from 'the beginning of the world; patriarchs, prophets, righ-'teous men, apoſtles, martyrs, confeſſors, biſhops, preſ-'byters, deacons, ſub-deacons, readers, ſingers, virgins, 'widows, and lay perſons: with all whoſe names thou 'knoweſt.' And theſe, or the like petitions, he obſerves (p. 104.) as they were never wholly omitted in any of the moſt antient liturgies, ought never to be omitted in ours. He adds, indeed, that 'they prayed 'only in general terms for them, without ſpecifying any 'of thoſe particulars; whereof [wherewith] they ſeem 'to have been wholly unacquainted.' But, to me, I own, it is unconceivable, how a perſon can pray to God for others, without forming a thought of ſomething deſired in their behalf; as for inſtance, the continuance of what they enjoy, or the addition of ſomething they have not: either of which would be very impertinent in the mouth of any one, who believes the tenor of the (undiſputed) ſcripture-doctrine concerning the ſtate of departed ſaints: whoſe portion of happineſs, we thence learn, is certainly determined according to what they did in the fleſh; and for ever ſecured by the promiſe of God, who cannot lie. What then can be the meaning of praying for them; but either to beg of God to be true to his word; or to beſtow upon them more than he has thought fit to allot them?

It is with no ſmall diſtruſt of my own underſtanding, that I offer this againſt the opinion of ſo great and good a man as Mr. WHISTON: but, as it may be a ſcruple with many others, who may not be able to ſolve the difficulty to their own minds; I dare ſay he will ſet the point in a fairer light; as well in vindication of that part of ſcripture, which he pays the greateſt regard to; as for the ſatisfaction of many ſerious Chriſtians, who may be as doubtful as

THOMAS DIDYMUS.

Gentlemen,

YOUR having already given place in your Paper to two or three Letters about the Vauxhall Advertiſement, encourages me to ask the ſame favour. I am a country Gentleman, whom a Chancery ſuit has lately brought to town; and who, now I am here, following the dictates of an innocent curioſity peculiarly incident to country people, frequent moſt publick places, and ſee all that is generally eſteemed worth being ſeen. An evening or two ago I went, accompanied by a friend, to the Spring-gardens at Vauxhall, promiſing myſelf great ſatisfaction in a diverſion ſo much encouraged by the good-natured town, notwithſtanding the conſiderable expence and hazard which attend it. At my firſt entrance the verdure of the trees, the regularity of the walks, the numerous lights with which the whole place was beſpangled, and the harmony of the muſick, ſtruck me with an unuſual delight; and I could not but ſilently approve the judicious taſte of the inhabitants of our metropolis. But I had ſcarce made half a tour of the gardens, when, to my great ſurprize, I obſerved in almoſt every corner of the walks, two or three ill-looking fellows with painted mopſticks, who burleſqued conſtables, and, with terrific looks and magiſterial behaviour, ſeemed to inſult the company, and threaten ſomething I was wholly ignorant of. Deſiring from my friend ſome account of theſe preternatural Phœnomena, he told me, They were guards ſtationed there to prevent indecencies, and ſecure the Ladies from the attacks of rude fellows. This anſwer quite ſhock'd me; I immediately looked round about me, and tho' I found there was but little company, I muſt own I admired ſo much wou'd come upon ſuch conditions. Is it poſſible, Gentlemen, that there can be no intercourſe between the moſt refined of both ſexes without ſuch criminal conſequences? Are the politeſt gentlemen, of the politeſt part of England, reſtrained from obſcenities by no more generous a motive than fear? Or can the chaſtity of the moſt virtuous ladies in Europe want theſe ridiculous helps? Freedom is, in my opinion, eſſential to pleaſure; they who, thro' an over-affected purity, baniſh the one, inadvertently deſtroy the other. I can aſſure you, Gentlemen, I brought no ill intentions along with me, and yet I have ſo much of an Engliſhman in me, that the conſtraint I thought myſelf under, gave me an invincible diſreliſh to the whole entertainment; and whatever the mirth of my companions inſinuated to the contrary, I could fancy myſelf at beſt but in a gaudy priſon. If theſe attendants are neceſſary at Vauxhall, why are they not equally ſo at the Park and all other publick walks? And yet I believe nobody will deny, but our ladies walk there with as much pleaſure and ſafety as in theſe garriſoned gardens. For my part I can't think the diſeaſe ſo bad as to require this deſperate remedy; and as ill an opinion as the maſter of the Gardens ſeem to have of his viſitors, I dare be anſwerable for their behaviour, even in a total abſence of his halbardeers. However, if he thinks them any ways uſeful or ornamental on the outſide of his gate, I could ſo far humour his officiouſneſs or vanity, as to connive at their being there; but the admitting them into the Gardens is a policy deſtructive of pleaſure; and an unprecedented affront to the breeding of the gentlemen and conduct of the ladies, and ought to be reſented as ſuch by all men of honour and women of virtue. I am

Your very humble ſervant,

ANTICONSTABULARIUS.

On Seignior SENESINO's leaving England.

1.

AS through a cool bower I chanced to ſtray,
A train of ſad mourners quite block'd up my way:
The general ſorrow I liſt'ned to hear,
Interrupted by nought but a ſigh or a tear.
I hearken'd with grief, and I wept at each verſe,
While thus their ſad tale they together rehearſe.
The Nightingale's going to leave our ſad coaſt,
SENESINO is going, the Warbler is loſt.

2.

Could not ſuppliant damſels your Journey delay?
Could nothing prevail then to lengthen your ſtay?
Could nor int'reſt, nor pity find place in your heart?
Your going's reſolv'd on. How moving to part!
Let fiddles, let harpſichords, lutes be no more:
Alas! without thee we may muſick give o'er.
What ſcenes of ſoft joy this curſt hour has croſt?
SENESINO is gone, our ſoft Warbler is loſt.

Whene'er Son qual nave attacks our ſad ears,
For Pallido it ſole we burſt into tears.
No more 'E follia provokes the Encore;
We hear Sent il fato, with pleaſure no more.
While rivers of tears from our eyes ſhall be ſhed,
A tribute too ſmall, ſince our charmer is fled.
The pleaſure he gave us we feel to our coſt,
Alas! he has left us; the Warbler is loſt.

In vain, garter'd worthies, pretend with your cares,
That you're night and day watching for England's affairs:
For had you compaſſion or love for your land,
We ſhould not dejected and weeping thus ſtand.
You ſuppliant ought on his knees t' have lay'd hold,
And have choak'd up his paſſage with mountains of gold.
Then in joy had we revell'd, nor e'er had been croſt,
We all hardſhips could bear, were our Warbler not loſt.

5.

No more the Hay-market has charms to enſnare,
No trilling gives pleaſure ſince thou art not there.
Let ivy round-creeping the walls all beſpread,
And hatchments declare too that harmony's fled;
Our mournings redouble, and beat in each breaſt;
Too great are our ſorrows to be e'er expreſt.
What ſcenes of ſoft joy this ſad hour has croſt!
SENESINO is gone; our ſoft Warbler is loſt.

6.

May Mocbath and Polly be doubly curſt,
From Italian ſoft muſick that wean'd us the firſt.
There Dukes, Lords and Earls full two hours can ſit,
And grin at the ſatire, tho' cut by the wit.
While op'ras were never accus'd of ſuch faults,
Not guilty of ſatire, unconſcious of thoughts.
What ſcenes of ſoft joy this ſad hour has croſt!
Our Nigtingale's gone, SENESINO is loſt.

7.

Then ſay, ye Peers, don't you redden with ſhame,
That you ſhould protect what we ought to diſclaim?
That Polly upholding ye croud there in throngs.
(Tho' ſinging alone to the Opera belongs.)
While Bravo no more in the houſe does reſound,
And canes of applauſe have deſerted the ground.
SENESINO is gone; the ſoft Warbler has croſt:
And too late will ye find what a treaſure you've loſt.

8.

Be kind, ye Zephyrs, and waft him ſafe o'er;
And we now alas muſt expect him no more;
For if too unruly and boiſt'rous you prove,
He'll diſarm all your fury, and ſing you to love.
But in that ſhould he fail, when you ſtorm on the main;
Take pity, ye winds, let us ſee him again.
But alas, 'tis in vain, he already has croſt,
The Warbler is gone, and for ever is loſt.

THURSDAY, July 29. Yeſterday his grace the Duke of Grafton appointed Mr. Keine, page of the removing Wardrobe to his Majeſty, in the room of Mr. Cook, deceas'd. LP.

Laſt ſunday ſe'nnight, Tate and Ogle, were taken out of the houſe of Tate's ſweet-heart's father near Kellingham in Northumberland; and were carried to Newcaſtle; Tate was chained down, but he told the gaoler it was to no purpoſe, for he could break through all; which he accordingly did in leſs than a quarter of an hour, before 2 magiſtrates and the gaoler; upon which a guard is ſet over them both. DP. DA. LP. G. —— This Tate ſeems to be a fool, as well as a rogue.

The undertaker of Shoreditch church, preſs'd by a very cloſe contract, being willing to get what he could by it, turn'd off his Engliſh labourers, who had 10 or 12 s. a week, and employ'd only Iriſh, who work for 5 or 6. This greatly incenſed the former, whoſe reſentments were heighten'd by other incidents, or rather reports. —— On ſaturday a frav happened between perſons of the two nations, at Holloway mount, where the Iriſh wounded ſeveral perſons with knives, but were defeated. —— On monday they met at divers ale-houſes and cook-ſhops, &c. and reſolved to ſend for the haymakers, to aſſiſt them againſt all who ſhould endeavour to hinder their working. The Engliſh inflamed at this, broke the windows of the houſes of ſeveral Iriſhmen, and did other miſchief; and in the evening they had a battle with the Iriſh in the fields. —— On tueſday the populace in great numbers reſorted about Whitechapel, Spittlefields, and Shoreditch, broke windows, &c. and broke into the houſe of one Borow a reputed Iriſhman, who kept the two brewers alehouſe, drank out his liquors, and broke almoſt every thing in the houſe. The people within defended themſelves with guns, and fired ſeven times, by which ſeveral perſons were wounded The tumult was at laſt ſuppreſſed by the train'd bands, and the guards of the Tower, &c. DJ.

Married, laſt week, at Houghton le Spring near Durham, the right hon. the Earl of Strathmore, to Miſs Nicholſon, a fine young Lady of great merit and fortune. LP. —— On the 20th inſt. DA. —— A beautiful young Lady, &c. DP. —— And a fortune of 20 000 l. G.

Died yeſterday morning, of a high fever, in St. Helen's, Mr. Nichols, an eminent Turky merchant. DP.

Laſt tueſday night a perſon in a high fever at the Bull and butcher in the by-road to Deptford, jump'd out of a window 2 ſtories high, and pitching upon his feet, ran away ſeemingly unhurt; but his ſtrength failing him, he was taken up, and died about 4 hours after. DP.

FRIDAY, July 30. We hear, that the rev. Mr. Butler, clerk of the cloſet to her Majeſty, is made prebendary of Rocheſter, in the room of the rev. Dr. Grant. DP. DA.

The rev. Mr. Ric. Terrick, A. M. fellow of Clarehall in Cambridge, is made preacher of [at] the Rolls. DP. DA.

On wedneſday an expreſs of ſome important affairs was diſpatch'd to his Majeſty, and 'tis aſſur'd his Majeſty will come home ſooner than he intended. DJ. — My brother ſeems to know the contents not only of the expreſs to, but likewiſe of that which will come from his Majeſty.

The ſame day orders were ſent to the Colonels of ſeveral of the regiments in Kent, and other counties, to keep a watchful eye on any unquiet ſpirits that ſhould happen to ſhew themſelves in thoſe parts. DJ. — Unquiet Spirits will not dare to ſhew themſelves, when ſo many penalties have been lately layed upon their appearance.

Yeſterday Mr. Neal was choſen ſecretary of the Million-bank, by a majority of one. DP. LP. —— Mr. Neal had 20, and Mr. Wallis 7 votes. DJ. —Mr. Neal 11. Mr. Lowman 9. DA.

Yeſterday Rog. Johnſon, who has been ſo long detained at the ſuit of the crown in Newgate, was diſcharg'd by virtue of an order from the Barons of the Exchequer, on the ſmugglers Act. LP.

Laſt night notwithſtanding the guards and the militia's patroling about Spittle-fields, ſome of the mob, in ſmall parties, rais'd contributions from ſeveral of the inhabitants, threatning on their non-compliance to break all their windows. DP.

Yeſterday 2 perſons caned to death one Patrick Mackendo, an Iriſhman, for ſpeaking his ſentiments a little freely on what had happen'd, &c. DJ.

On wedneſday arriv'd at the Wet Dock at Deptford, on account of ſome private merchants, the London, from Greenland, with 7 whales. DA.

We hear, that a few days ago, Mary Toſts, the famous rabbit woman of Godalmin, going acroſs a warren, her foot ſlipt into a rabbit borough, and ſhe broke her leg in a miſerable manner. DA.

Great numbers of Iriſh labourers being come into Surry, and offering themſelves to work at a cheaper rate than uſual, no leſs than 7 pariſhes roſe at once, and drove them away. DA.

A juſtice of the peace near Dartford having made a Mittimus to commit four perſons for the late riot, ſome hundreds aſſembled round his houſe, threatning to pull it down; on which he was ſo good-natur'd as to let them go, and the mob ſoon diſperſed. DP,

Died on wedneſday, at Newington-green, Mr. Wright, formerly an eminent Italian merchant, ſaid to have died worth 40,000 l. DA.

Capt. Fowell, commander of his Majeſty's ſloop The Spence, ſhot himſelf through the mouth with a piſtol, in his paſſage laſt week from Spithead to the Nore, and was found dead in his cabbin, the piſtol in one hand, and a ſword in the other; his Will lying on the table. DA. LP.

On wedneſday, a ſhoemaker in Northumberland-court near Aldgate, having ſome words with his wife, ſwore he would revenge himſelf on her, and immediately went up ſtairs and hang'd himſelf. LP.

SATURDAY, July 31. The hon. Lieutenant General Evans, Governour of Chelſea-college, has appointed John Burgoine, Gent. to be captain of Chelſea college, in the room of Capt. Tho. Perry deceas'd. DJ.

3313 perſons have been, and may be diſcharged (many of them from gaols, and more from exile) from perſecutions for offences committed ſince 1723. The forfeitures and Penalties for which they are proſecuted amount to 4,156,148 l. G. — 'Tis ſtrange my Courtly Brother ſhould call theſe proſecutions, perſecutions.

Yeſterday one Edwin, a gardener, attempted to hang himſelf on a tree on Chelſea-common; but being ſeen by ſome men at work, was cut down juſt in time to preſerve life, after which they tied him neck and heels, and let him remain ſo 2 hours as a puniſhment. Being asked the occaſion of his attempting ſo ſhocking an act, he anſwered, He had a Wife who was a ſcold. DA. — This, and the ſtory of the ſhoe-maker, ſeem deſigned rather for pieces of wit than news.

On friday night between 9 and 10 a mob of ſeveral hundred people aſſembled at Roſemary-lane, Rag-fair, &c. crying out, Who is an Engliſhman, and for the good of his country let him put out lights; and Down with the Iriſh They then went to ſeveral houſes, kept by Iriſh people, or where Iriſh lodged, broke the windows, ſhutters, &c. and enter'd the houſes, and broke to pieces houſhold goods, &c. but being oppoſed by juſtice Philips, aſſiſted by a guard from the Tower, they were ſuppreſs'd, 9 perſons being taken priſoners. There was no houſe demoliſh'd, as reported in one of the Evening Papers. DJ. —— [Yet the DP. and G. of this day repeat from the London Evening Poſt the account of the demolition of 5 houſes.] —— On ſaturday ſix were committed to Newgate. DA. DJ. LP. G. —— Laſt night a mob aſſembled at Charing-croſs, and committed ſeveral diſorders, inſulting many people as being Iriſhmen. LP. — If the Iriſh, by working at an under-price, may be looked upon as incroachers, the only way to prevent it is, not by aiming at their deſtruction, but by finding out ſome method for employing them in their own country, where their calamities now exceed thoſe of the very Laplanders. DJ. — Aiming at their deſtruction is ſurely one way, tho' not a juſtifiable one.

Married, laſt Wedneſday, Chriſt. Lowther of High-Wickam, Eſq; to Miſs Robinſon, a very beautiful young lady with a very pretiful fortune. G.

Yeſterday afternoon a houſe which was pulling down near the Croſs-keys Brewhouſe in Barnaby-ſtreet, fell in ſuddenly, by which ſeveral of the workmen were much bruiſed and wounded. DJ. —— 4 were miſerably, wounded and one mortally, and the other three ſo dangerouſly that it is much queſtioned whether they can recover. DP.

MONDAY, Aug. 2. Yeſterday the rev. Dr. Walker preached before her Majeſty, and the Princeſſes Amelia and Caroline; who received the communion from the hands of the rev. Dr. Butler, Clerk of the cloſet to her Majeſty. G. —— And that day being the anniverſary of his late Majeſty's happy acceſſion to the throne, her Majeſty received the compliments of, &c. G. LP.

His Majeſty has been pleaſed to appoint Geo. Clarke, Eſq; to be governor of New-york, in the room of Col. Cosby deceaſed. DA. G. —— And to preſent the rev. Dr. John Thomas to the rectory of St. Vedaſt, alias Foſter, void by the promotion of the right rev. Dr. Maddox. DP. DJ. G.

The young woman from Rygate, lately cured at Epſom, is about 18 years old, and had been a cripple 13 years. On her left ſide, her ankle, knee, hip, ſhoulder, elbow, and wriſt were all diſlocated; and her ankle, knee, elbow, and wriſt on the right ſide; and all her fingers ſo contracted, that they appeared like the talons of an eagle. The operation was perform'd on tueſday in about 4 hours, before ſeveral perſons of diſtinction; and Mr. Alderman Perry gave Mrs. Wellin 10 guineas. LP.

Yeſterday morning about 3, two well-dreſs'd young men in liquor quarrell'd in Fleet-ſtreet, and came to blows, when one was kill'd on the ſpot, &c. DP. —— They had ſome words about ſome common women, and one hit the other with his fiſt a blow on the ſide of the head, of which he dropt down dead: he is found to be one Mr. Adminſon an apothecary, DA. — On ſaturday a young fellow pick'd up a miſtreſs in Fleet-ſtreet: ſoon after a diſpute happened between him and ſome fellows, in which the unfortunate perſon was kill'd; he lies in Peterborough-court, but is not yet known. LP.

Died on wedneſday, at Rumford, the right hon. Nevil Lord Lovelace. DP. —— Of a conſumption. DA. G. —— On friday, on the road to London. DJ. —— As he was about to take coach. LP. —— The title is extinct, and the eſtate goes to his Lordſhip's ſiſter, the hon. Miſs Lovelace, one of the maids of honour to her Majeſty. DP. DA.

TUESDAY, Aug. 3. On ſunday evening ſome mobs aroſe in Southwark and Lambeth, and another by Oxford-road; but they did no damage, only taking upon themſelves to interrogate people, Whether they were for the Engliſh or Iriſh. At night ſeveral ſmall parties of horſe grenadiers diſperſed two mobs that were gathering in Ratcliffe highway. DJ. —— Yeſterday a man was committed to Newgate for creating a riot at Charing-croſs on ſunday night. DA.

Yeſterday 6 young watermen row'd from London-bridge to Chelſea, for Mr. Dogget's coat and badge, which was won by Tho. Hilliard of Weſtminſter-bridge. DA. DP. LP.

Mr. Martin's well-boat, lying at Goat-ſtairs at Bankſide, was ſo crowded with ſpectators, that all of a ſudden it ſunk down with near 100 people in it; but there being ſo much help at hand, we hear they were all ſav'd. DP.

On ſunday a gentleman well mounted riding out, was attack'd by a ſingle highwayman on Deptford-common, and endeavouring to draw his hanger, it unhappily entangled in his coat; on which the rogue knock'd him off his horſe with a piſtol, and having robb'd him of a watch and ſeveral guineas, ſtripp'd him of his coat and waiſtcoat, and then rode way with his horſe for London, which he left at the White-horſe inn in Southwark. DP. —Saying he would call for him in an hour's time. DJ. —— Attacked by 3 footpads. DA. —— Capt. Harle, an Italian merchant, about 1 in the afternoon was attack'd, &c. the villains wounded him in the head with a hanger, and abuſed him in a moſt barbarous and inhuman manner, leaving him half dead. LP.

Died on tueſday, the right hon. Alexander Earl of Balcarras, Lord Lindſay, &c. DA. LP. —— Succeeded in honour and eſtate by his brother Jam. Lindſay, a captain in his Majeſty's land forces. G. —— On ſaturday at Stockwell, Will. Angell, Eſq; one of the verderors of Windſor foreſt. DA. —— At his father's ſeat. LP. —— Yeſterday in Philpot-lane, Mrs. Saunderſon, an ancient maiden gentlewoman, reputed worth 30,000 l. DP.

On ſunday a ſeafaring man, about 50 years of age, having had his pocket pick'd of ſeveral guineas by ſome lewd women at a houſe near Horſly-down New Stairs, was ſo exaſperated at his loſs, that in order to prevent any future temptations of that kind, he cut off his privities: he was carried to St. Thomas's Hoſpital, and died laſt night: DP.—This whole Comi-tragical affair was acted in Wapping: where the poor fellow did not cut off any thing, but only fatally mangled himſelf.

WEDNESDAY, Aug. 4. His grace the Duke of Beaufort has preſented the rev. Mr. Denniſon to the living of Charlton in Hampſhire, and another living in that neighbourhood, both vacant by the death of the rev. Mr. Yalden. DJ.

'Tis ſaid, notwithſtanding, the late Act againſt ſmuggling, ſome of thoſe fellows are gone from the coaſt of Suſſex to France, to bring goods over at all adventures. LP. — 'Tis ſaid, that this paragraph was made by the ſayer.

Yeſterday morning the Eagle, Capt. Williamſon, bound to the Weſt-Indies, having all her lading on board ready to proceed on her voyage, overſet on a large bank of mud or ſand at Wapping. DA. ——The loſs is computed at above 700 l. DP.

On monday ſome rogues conveyed themſelves on board a ſhip which lay off Smith's wharf, and got into the forecaſtle, and carry'd off ſome wearing apparel, &c. without being diſcovered; there were 2 perſons on the quarter-deck, during the whole time. LP.

Yeſterday morning a houſe in Wallbrook fell down, occaſion'd by the party wall giving way, &c. there were ſeveral people in the houſe, who were all taken out unhurt. LP. DP. DJ. —— The ſame day as the workmen were pulling down ſome old houſes in Smithfield, the flooring fell in, whereby one man was buried in the rubbiſh. DP.

Yeſterday morning about 3, a fire broke out at a Pitch and Tar houſe in Blackman-ſtreet, which entirely consumed the same, and damaged several others. G. D P. LP. DJ. ——At a hemp and cork warehouse. Damage 1000 l. DA.

Last friday the Assizes ended at Winchester, when 2 persons received sentence of death. DP.

On monday a woman was drowned near Standgate, by the oversetting of a boat. G.—— 2 girls, one about 8, and the other 4, playing near a horse-pond in Faulcon-inn yard Southwark, were drown'd. DA.

From the PEGASUS in Grub-street.

In the True and Candid Relation of the good and bad effects, &c. pag. 89. is the following CASE.

'CASE XLI. The Landlord, who kept the Sunderland Arms in Sackville-street, had a Dropsy, consulted Ward, took his Medicines, and died. He sent for J. Garnier, Apothecary, and Stephens, the Surgeon, before he died, but his Case was become desperate.'

In opposition to this Case, a Letter signed by his Widow FRANCES CLARK, was published in the Daily Advertiser of July 23, wherein she asserts, that her husband having 'a complication of Distempers, and more particularly the Dropsy, was attended by Mr. Garnier, whose Prescriptions he follow'd several months, till he told him he could do no more for him, and advis'd him to be tapp'd. Upon which Mr. Clark talk'd with Mr. Stephens about it, but at last determin'd to apply to Mr. Ward; whose Medicines had so good an Effect, that Mr. Garnier (who out of friendship continued to visit him) held up his hands with admiratton, saying, he was glad to see there was a man in the world who could do more than he, and pray'd that God would continue a blessing to it; which indeed seem'd to follow every Dose, 'till Mr. Clark got so well as to get abroad, to the wonder of himself, and all his Friends and Neighbours. But he was a man of pleasure, and kept a brace of good Geldings, and went into Hertfordshire at a prodigious wet time in September last, and stay'd there several days, following his country diversions, and, as she believes, took cold, drank very hard upon it, and entirely omitted taking Mr. Ward's Medicines; relapsed, swell'd again, and died in October: whereas, had he continued to take them, and followed his Rules, and taken any tolerable care of himself, she really believes, he would have been restored to as perfect a state of health, as he was in before he was first taken ill.'

It is somewhat remarkable, that this short Case should be picked out, after so long deliberation, as the properest to be first opposed. But if it be considered, that J. Garnier the Apothecary, who might probably have contradicted the greatest part of this account, is dead, no one need wonder at the choice of this particular Case. When I published it, I did not design it as an instance of the fatal effects of Ward's Medicines, in which they had occasioned the death of the Patient; but as an instance of their ineffectualness, and to shew, that his success in the Dropsy is no better than in any other disease: which are my very words in my introduction to the Case, pag. 89. And this is undeniably shewed by it: for that the person had the Dropsy, consulted Ward, took his Medicines, and died, is not in the least contradicted by the Wife of the deceased.

She says indeed, that her husband was under Mr. Garnier's care, and consulted Mr. Stephens, before he applied to Mr. Ward; and that afterwards Mr. Garnier himself held up his hands with admiration at the good effects of Mr. Ward's Medicines upon him. This may possibly be true, and may probably pass for truth, since the only person who could authentically contradict it is dead. But the words here say'd to have been spoken by him on this occasion do not seem very probable, that he was glad to see there was a man in the world who COULD DO MORE than he; which plainly intimate, that before he had met with this extraordinary effect of Ward's Medicines, he did not think that there was a man in the world who could do MORE than himself. I cannot imagine, that any person who was acquainted with J. Garnier, can think him guilty of the vanity and self-conceit necessarily included in these words.

But her husband got so well as to get abroad, went into Hertfordshire at a prodigious wet time, stay'd there several days following his country diversions. This good Woman seems to imagine, that because her Husband was partly emptied for a while of that load of water which oppressed him, he was therefore well. Which if he really was, she gives no satisfactory account at all, how he came to relapse into his former illness. She mentions the prodigious wet time in which he took a short journey, and the country diversions which he followed, as the immediate occasion of his relapse; as if those diversions and wet weather were particularly bad for his watry distempers. She adds indeed, that he took cold, drank very hard, and entirely omitted taking Mr. Ward's Medicines; but all this she does not pretend to affirm of her own knowledge, but speaks with great diffidence, introducing it with, and I BELIEVE took cold, &c. But had she directly asserted, instead of only believing, that he drank very hard, yet no one could believe that assertion, who had been assured by his acquaintance, that during his illness in Town he had declined drinking, where he had many more temptations to it than he could have in the country. And as to his entirely omitting to take Ward's Medicines, I have been positively informed, by a person of wealth and reputation, a very near neighbour to H. Clark, that he himself, about three weeks before he died, told that person, that he continued taking Ward's Medicines, 'till they ceased to have any good effect upon him, though he took a double quantity, and he swelled and grew daily worse and worse. —— From what his Wife immediately subjoins, that he relapsed, swelled again, and died in October, the Reader will naturally conclude, that he died in the Country. But he really died at his own house, where he was attended by J. Garnier before 8 in the morning, the very day he died; and afterwards by Stephens and Garnier, who went in order to tap him, but found his case too desperate. This, with what I have insisted on before, shews, that every thing asserted by me in CASE XLI was strictly true.

JOSEPH CLUTTON.

CASE LII.

Gentlemen,

MR. SADLER, a Periwig-maker in Holborn, sent for Mr. LUPTON, Apothecary in Chancery-lane, July 24th, 1736, being Saturday, about 9 at night, to visit his brother, who had that morning taken a dose of Mr. WARD's Liquid. He seemed to be quite spent and exhausted, had a universal coldness, weak pulse, meagre countenance, and complained of an intolerable pain about the upper Orifice of his stomach, which he had laboured under for some hours; and begged that Mr. LUPTON would, if possible, give him some Ease. He told him, that he had received a Vial of Liquor of Mr. WARD, to cure some slight complaints which he had upon him; half of which he had taken that morning, and the other half he was ordered to take the following morning. This remaining part of the Liquor was brought to the Apothecary; (it was blueish, and had a Powder at the bottom) and he touching his tongue with it, and not being able to judge from thence what it was, desired it might be set by. The poor man said, that it had vomited and purged him very much, and brought upon him those grievous complaints. Mr. LUPTON sent something to relieve him, which had some Effect; for he sweat a little and had some Ease in the night; so that any farther advice was deferred for the present. But when Mr. LUPTON went again in the evening, his pains were returned with a motion to stool, &c. therefore, on his return home, meeting with a Physician, he related to him the Patient's case, who advised that some laxative oily medicines might be tryed, he much suspecting there was some corrosive Poison in that Liquor. This was accordingly done: But on Monday Morning the Apothecary finding him much worse, called in Mr. Shipton, who finding the former symptoms very violent on the Patient, and a most insatiable thirst withall, he ordered him a clyster and some oily drrughts, but before they could be administred the poor Patient died.

Mr. LUPTON took the remaining part of the said blue Liquor to Mr. CLUTTON's shop, and desired that he would assist him in the examination of it, to discover what it was compounded of. Accordingly, this Liquor, in quantity about an ounce, (which seemed to be some mineral powders put into water, and not wine) was emptied, powder and all, into a gallipot, and then the Liquor gently poured off from the heavy powder, which remained at the bottom. This Powder being directly dryed by the sun, was put to the microscope, where there were plain to be seen, a white powder, a yellow transparent one, and a blue one. A mixture being made of white Arsenick, glass of Antimony, and blue Smalt, these powder'd as near to the size of WARD's, as could be guess'd, wash'd, dry'd, and put to the microscope, were also examin'd by five persons, who tarried the whole time of the experiment, and were all of opinion, that Arsenick and glass of Antimony, with a little blue, were the real principles of the Powder, which was in that Liquor, and proved so deadly to this poor man.

FOREIGN NEWS.

THURSDAY, July 29. Besides the vast quantities of ammunition embarking at Barcelona, 18 battallions of foot, and 2 of dragoons were ordered thither. The British and Dutch ministers, having in conjunction demanded an explanation of the design of this armament, were answered, That it was not intended to be injurious to the interests of Great Britain and the States General, but to change the face of affairs in Italy. DA.

FRIDAY, July 30. The King of France has establish'd a new manufactory of serge at Mondidier in Picardy, very proper for cloathing his troops, &c. Were the exportation of British and Irish wool prevented, there would be business enough for all the hands in Britain and Ireland, without peoples knocking out one another's brains, for endeavouring to get work. DP.

The Parliament of Paris have releas'd a Mathurin Monk of the order of the Holy Trinity, from his monastical fetters, who had entered the religious state when too young, and incapable of chusing, DP. &c.

SATURDAY, July 31. —— Amsterdam, Aug. 2. There has been great intriguing for some time in the seven Provinces for Stadholder: 5 are for investing the Prince of Orange with that dignity; but 2 vigorously oppose it. No means are wanting to bring over the people, whatever they may do as to the magistrates, who appear hitherto inflexible. DJ.

We hear, that Mr. Keene has not yet obtain'd the Schedule for the annual South-sea ship, the court of Spain pretending that there is already a great glut of European merchandize in New Spain. DA.

MONDAY, Aug. 2. The evening before the Diet broke up at Warsaw, the Marshal informed the Nuncios, that he was informed, that a certain Power had dispers'd 50,000 crowns among them, to prevent the Diet's coming to a happy conclusion. Upon which it was agreed, that every Nuncio, to clear himself of suspicion, should take an oath, that he had not receiv'd any money. *LP.
